Dear Dad,

Father's day! Today I became A Muslim and I wish you were here to see this with your own eyes. I heard that you are doing better and that you are getting closer to get out of the hospital. I'm very thankful that you are getting healthy and I can't wait to see you again.

I think that if you and I were given a chance to reunite, I will make the most out of it. My first assignment is to write a letter to you and I feel that I can write a book with things to say.

My words will never be enough to express how I feel about you. For the past few weeks I've been reading and last night I made my decision to convert to Islam. When I came I was welcome and I felt that I was home. I was told that I'm a new person now and that I have to be clean. I'm very thankful and humble for a new life.

Dear Ziad,

Sometimes I have questions about life that I can't understand. I'm reading and the more I learn ~~the~~ the more that I want to learn. I'm discovering things on my own now and I found a new path in life. I'm thankful and happy to have found a new meaning in life. If I was shown this path and I wish I could share this with someone else. As I'm learning I would also like to teach.
