Dear Father,

I appreciate everything you have done to raise me up to this point in my life. I'm at a critical stage of my teenage years where I can easily go astray and make wrong decisions, and at some points I have. Sometimes, to a point at which I am doubtful of my life but no matter what wrong I seem to do, you always cheer me up.

I guess when you told me to think of you more as a friend than a father I shouldn't have let it go through one ear and out the other. I know I say that now but I bet the next thing you tell me I will do the same but your words there to reiterate advice. So in the end I don't realize the importance of your words but it is nice to know that someone cares. You bet your father at age 3, now in 17, so I have no right to complain about the little time I have to see you. Happy Baba Yorn!

Love,
Amrwan

First of all let me tell you when you walk into this class it's like falling into a pot of boiling water with an insane wizard brewing a spell for success, Lahoroi. Like a boiling pot this class will start grilling you from the beginning but like a recipe you have different ingredients. Meaning you decide what you want to take out of this class. You can be a doctor like 99.9% of us or you could follow this class and be a third of the Quran. Do not be intimidated by this, we all being cooked in the same pot were just at different stages than each other and you start from wherever you are. Note! I'm probably the biggest dentist in this class so you'll like me. When I take this class seriously I can actually accomplish things, so give it the commitment you believe it deserves and you'll be a load of BS.
